

From: Ian Jung
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2016 10:56 PM
To: HSSframework
Subject: Japan sex slave during the world war 2

To whom may it concern

Comfort women and girls who were forced into sexual slavery by the Imperial Japanese Army in occupied territories before and during World War.

Many of the women were from occupied countries, including Korea, China, and the Philippines, although women from Burma, Thailand, Vietnam, Malaysia, Taiwan(then a Japanese dependency), Indonesia (then the Dutch East Indies), East Timor (then Portuguese Timor), and other Japanese-occupied territories were used for military "comfort stations".

Military correspondence of the Japanese Imperial Army shows that the aim of facilitating comfort stations was the prevention of rape crimes committed by Japanese army personnel and thus preventing the rise of hostility among people in occupied areas.

Students must learn the fact, what happened during the World war 2 and this women abuse should not be repeated in the future. Please add this content to the text book.

Thank you